Get to Harrods now - GQ.co In the market for super-exclusive shoes? Get to Harrods now By Nick Carvell 06 August 15 If you're a fan of limited-run shoes (no pun intended), we suggest you get yourself to Harrods during August. This week the West London institution launched Made With Love: a campaign to promote, and we quote, "the provenance and artisan talent of hand-crafted goods". In other words, a motherlode of exclusive, one-off designs from famous labels have just arrived in store - and nowhere is this more impressive than in the men's shoe department. Featuring over 35 pairs, this superb selection of footwear comes courtesy of a whole host of noteworthy names - Church's, Jimmy Choo, Giuseppe Zanotti, Etro, and Maison Martin Margiela, to name just five - all producing at least one exclusive model that you won't find anywhere except Harrods. Better yet, there are styles to suit every taste from ultra-traditional, everyday classics to more out-there, eye-catching kicks. We particularly like Lanvin's metallic python trainers and Gucci's new take on its signature horsebit loafer, cut from a rich burgundy leather that the Italian lathermasters have never used before. Want to slip into a pair? Get to the lower ground floor in Harrod's as soon as you can - there's only a few of each being made, and when they're gone they're gone. From ?260. Available to buy exclusively at Harrods throughout August. Nick Carvell Nick is Fashion Editor of GQ.co. Follow him on Twitter and Instagram at @nickcarvell.
